This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

HISTORY OF THE BOYLSTON MEDICAL SOCIETY

THE Boylston Medical Society was founded on the 6th of January, 1811, ninety-six years ago. It was incorporated June 13, 1823. In 1811 the Harvard Medical School, which previous to December, 1810, had been located in Cambridge, held its exercises in Boston, using for this purpose rooms over White's apothecary shop at 39 Marlboro Street, now the site of 400 Washington Street. It is not unlikely that here were held the first meetings of the Society. With the exception of a book of Treasurer's Accounts dating from 1811 and a letter file containing correspondence of about the same date, compiled in 1863, no records of these early gatherings are to be found. The purpose of the Society seems to have been identical with its present aims as far as the advancement of undergraduate medical education is concerned, the manner of conducting meetings much the same.

The correspondence of this period reflects the spirit of the times and indicates an active interest taken in the Society by its members. Several letters among those preserved were written by men expelled from the organization on account of some lack of conformity to its requirements. Membership was highly prized, it would appear, though controversy and discord were not always to be avoided.

The Treasurer's Accounts were all carefully recorded, and they too reflect contemporary conditions. The earliest, dated January 31st, 1811, is a record of expenditures for paper, inkstand, sand-box, sand, and quills. These items suggest that records were kept by the Secretary at that time, though unfortunately now missing.

The Society was named in honor of Nicholas Ward Boylston, Esq., who made provision in his will for an annual premium of the value of twenty-five dollars, which if advisable could be divided into a first prize of fifteen and a second prize of ten dollars, to be awarded for the best medical dissertations offered by members of the Society during the current school year. At an early date the Society also undertook the collection of a library of medical literature for the use of its members. The ultimate fate of this collection, which though apparently never of great extent is occasionally mentioned in later records, is at present shrouded in impenetrable mystery. No trace of it can be found nor any record of its disposal. It is not improbable that it became a part of the general Boylston Medical Library left by Nicholas Ward Boylston, to Harvard University, and ultimately placed in the Boston Medical Library.

John Collins Warren was President of the Society during its first year of existence and James Jackson during the second. Among other members of this period were John Warren and Benjamin Waterhouse, followed in the next few years by Jacob Bigelow, George Cheyne Shattuck, Henry I. Bowditch, and J. Mason Warren.

The earliest complete record of a meeting of the Society now in existence is that of one held October 30, 1829. Since 1816 the lectures of the Medical School had been held in the building known as the Massachusetts Medical College on Mason Street, and this meeting probably took place in the medical lecture-room of this building, spoken of in the record as Dr. Jackson's lecture-room. The exercises consisted of an address by the President, Joseph W. McKean, on Pathological Anatomy and the transaction of business. The Secretary stated that the library consisted of one hundred and forty-nine volumes in good condition, besides many pamphlets.

Among the articles of the By-Laws of the Society at this time is given the wording of the certificate of membership then in use. It is after the form of this diploma that the one published by the Society during the present year has been modelled.

During the following years till 1839 meetings were held weekly either at the Massachusetts Medical College or at the homes of presidents. The exercises consisted of dissertations by members or by the President and debates on various medical subjects. Catalogues of members were published at various intervals and lists of books of the medical library, which seems to have been little used.

Interest in the Society would seem to have waned during the years 1838 and 1839, and this state of affairs culminated in the last meeting, held December 21, 1839, of which the record is as follows: "The Society met according to adjournment, but as very few were present and as the members were busily engaged in dissections the meeting was adjourned subject to the call of the President."

This event closed for three years the first epoch in the life-history of the Boylston.

In spite of a number of appeals to the students and attempts to resuscitate the Society by the President, Henry G. Wiley, it remained dead until December, 1842. At this time, after Dr. Wiley had decided to make no further trials, through the efforts of Benjamin E. Cotting, the Vice-President, a number of informal meetings were held at his office on Winter Street for the purpose of reorganization. The records of these meetings were unfortunately not preserved; but they certainly were successful in their results, for on the evening of Thursday, January 12, 1843, the first organized meeting since 1839 was held at Dr. Cotting's home. Officers of the Society were then chosen, Dr. Cotting being elected President upon Dr. Wiley's resignation. The next meeting also took place at Dr. Cotting's house, but subsequent meetings were held weekly in the library of the Medical College on Mason Street. Aside from the transaction of business the meetings consisted of the reading of essays and discussion of medical questions of the day. Much interest was aroused at this time and the list of members was a long one. Of those composing the Society in 1843 only one is alive at the present time, and to him, Dr. Cyrus S. Mann of Hubbardston, Massachusetts, belongs the honor of being the oldest living member.

From 1850 to 1854 many of the meetings were held in the rooms of the Tremont Street Medical School, a private institution run by Jacob Bigelow and others at 33 Tremont Row, over Burnett's apothecary store. A few were held in one of the rooms at the Massachusetts General Hospital. The meetings were usually held weekly, though they were not regular. During the winter of 1855–6 there were none at all.

The following interesting description of affairs at this time, in the Medical School as well as the Boylston, Dr. David W. Cheever who held the office of President 1862–3 has kindly furnished on request. Of his undergraduate days he writes:

"Fifty years ago I entered the Harvard Medical School. From November, 1854, to March, 1858, I was a member of the Boylston Medical Society. The number of those who constituted the Society was, from the class of 1854–5 eleven, from 1855–6 none, from 1856–7 twelve, making the Society consist of twenty-three members. I will not say that these were all the best men in the class, but I will assert that one could count on the fingers of the two hands every man who rose in his profession at that particular epoch to which I belonged. Why was this? It must be laid more to the low grade of the students than to the meagreness of the course of study.

"The classes were largely composed of uneducated men, of adventurers of fortune, or, at any rate, of those who sought the medical profession carelessly and indifferently. A diploma was what they wanted, and a majority of them obtained it. On the other hand, the professors were of the highest grade in our community and in our country.

"Jacob Bigelow was a recognized medical philosopher, known also in Europe; John B. S. Jackson was the best pathologist in the United States; Edward H. Clarke was a leading therapeutist and consultant; H. J. Bigelow, an accomplished surgeon; Oliver Wendell Holmes—but why try to laud him? These were eminent men; they taught well the best-known medical science and art of their day, but their system of teaching was defective, and their auditors largely of a low grade. Diffusion of studies, as contrasted with the present concentration, prevailed. In one morning, one listened to the virtues of ipecacuanha from 8 to 9, to typhoid fever from 9 to 10, to morbid anatomy or the simple inorganic chemistry from 10 to 11, to surgery from 11 to 12, to exercises on a stuffed manikin in obstetrics and to eloquent descriptions of travail from 12 to 1, and to anatomy from 1 to 2. At that hour one was full of learning and empty of food. To assimilate, but first to sort out and digest, was the task.

"On the other hand these varieties were repeated: you had them three times, covering three courses, though only two were required, and you gradually absorbed the most important points, thus establishing the medical perspective. Now anatomy and physiology are practically taught in one year, and put away as finished. But you cannot pigeonhole knowledge, and find it again when you want it; it is forgotten easily, especially anatomy. When I studied, a few of us pursued anatomy as our best friend. We dissected three winters, and we dissected by day and by night. Many winter evenings were spent over the subject. We always got all the material we wanted; there were seventy subjects a winter used in the classes, and of these many small parts were thrown up and wasted. Although we had only one hour's supervision in the twenty-four, we often studied and dissected four to six hours in the dissecting-room. Bear in mind also that the opportunity for clinical instruction was of the smallest,—two visits a week to one hospital, one hour in a ward, in classes of fifty to sixty students. About this time analysis of the urine began to be talked of. A clinical conference was founded. But it illustrates the thirst for knowledge that tricks were played on the teachers and lager beer substituted for urine in the test glasses. So too in the dissecting-room the tedium of study was softened winter evenings by a keg of lager, kept in the janitor's closet. The ambitious few—and very few they were—sought outside instruction in the city in private courses, paid for by the student,—Dr. H. W. Williams on the eye, Dr. H. I. Bowditch on auscultation, and also quiz courses by young graduates. The greater part of the class floundered along, noisy, careless often, until the dreaded Ides of March brought them up before the bar of an examination. It was oral, lasting eighty minutes; however a written thesis was required.

"There was one fine custom which has disappeared, namely a Medical Commencement. The best graduating theses were read like commencement parts, and an address, as a valedictory, given by one of the professors. The addresses were good and useful; there was also an introductory address when the school opened. I feel that we have lost in dignity by abolishing the Medical Commencement. It was well attended. The students got good practical advice for their conduct in life,—ethical instruction.

"As I remember the Boylston meetings, they were held in the library in North Grove Street. It was a hall bedroom in size, with some fixed, stained, polished book-shelves. It had a long narrow table, about which perhaps sixteen could sit, and yellow wooden settees. A paper was read, with some discussion. I am inclined to think we had morbid specimens occasionally. The meetings were fairly attended. Often little interest centred in the Boylston Prize. There have been some fine monographs, but later in life I was on the Boylston Committee, and we failed to award a prize for three years in succession. The Boylston Society was kept alive, and it was highly thought of."

The meetings of the Society were held with more or less regularity up to February, 1861. From this time on till January 6, 1863, only one meeting was held, as during that period all the officers and most of the members had entered the service of their country.

In 1863 the organization entered upon a period of prosperity and enthusiasm which has held till the present time. The meetings were well attended, the medical questions of the day were discussed, and great interest was aroused. Some of the results arrived at in debate are striking as showing the great advance in certain lines made since the Civil War and resultant upon the advent of the more modern methods of exact scientific investigation. For example, at one meeting the discussion was as to whether or not scarlet fever was contagious. The speakers on one side of the question proved to the satisfaction of the members that the disease should not be so considered.

Of the year 1875, in which he was an undergraduate member, and of the time ten years later when he held the office of President, Dr. Vincent Y. Bowditch writes as follows:

"As a student, I attended the meetings held at that time in a small room in the old Medical School in North Grove Street. Although the surroundings were even more forlorn than in the school building in Boylston Street, the same ardor and interest were shown as in later days, and I always recall the meetings with great pleasure. Dr. George G. Tarbell was President during my student days.

"When I was President of the Society we held our meetings in the smoking-room of the building on Boylston Street, and I never shall forget the enthusiasm I felt for those delightful Friday evenings.

"The chief event of that winter was the invitation given to Dr. Conrad Wesselhoeft, a homoeopath who died about two years ago, to give us his views upon homoeopathy. At that time the antagonism between the regular profession and the newer sect was very much stronger than now,—the reflection, or afterglow it may be called, of the fierce opposition of several years previous when the homoeopaths were expelled from the Massachusetts Medical Society. This doubtless was the cause of the refusal of the Faculty to allow us to hold the meeting in the Medical School.

"My father, Dr. Henry I. Bowditch, thereupon offered the use of his house at 113 (later 324) Boylston Street, and in the spring of 1885 one of the most interesting and instructive meetings I ever attended was held.

"By the courteous permission of Dr. Wesselhoeft, I had invited Dr. David Hunt, one of the most intelligent men in the profession, who had formerly practised homoeopathy and had renounced the name, to give us his reasons for so doing. After Dr. Wesselhoeft had read his paper, Dr. Hunt courteously but firmly stated his reasons for differing with the reader. My father then alluded to the birth of Homoeopathy during his younger days, and his belief that although the theories were in his opinion full of fallacies, the fact that patients got well under their methods had had a most salutary effect upon the fearfully heroic methods of the old school, when blistering, purging, bloodletting, and nauseous dosing had been carried to a fearful extent. The students then asked what questions they wished, and during the three hours passed I think there was not a man who did not feel that every moment was filled with interest.

"I speak of this meeting because it was, I believe, a stepping-stone in the gradual change of feeling which has come into the profession on these questions, and it was brought about largely by the keen interest of the students at that time in the Boylston Society."

The Medical School moved in 1883 into its new quarters, now of the past, corner of Exeter and Boylston streets, and the Society for a number of years held its gatherings there. What the meetings were like in the early nineties, Dr. Richard C. Cabot, who joined the club in 1891 and who is now President, tells in the following words:

"We met in a little stuffy room about ten by fifteen feet, partitioned off from the hall in the old Medical School, where the lockers are now. The room was the only smoking and loafing room which the students had during the week, and there was generally very tangible evidence of this fact when we met on Friday evenings. There was an old water-tank in one corner and a very large spittoon; the latter very frequently utilized, for in those days we had many students in the school who chewed tobacco, and some of them members of the Boylston Club.

"The Club was dead serious; no singing or entertainment of any kind. The fellows took lots of trouble about their papers, as they do now; and the discussion was animated, though not more so than at present. I thought then, as I have ever since, that it was the most intelligent discussion, from the point of view of securing an increase in knowledge among the participants, that I have ever seen in any medical society of any kind.

"Dr. W. M. Conant was President in my day, and he took a great deal of pains about the meetings. I do not think he ever missed a night. We did not usually have any 'visitors,' but we generally did have a prepared case, read by one of the undergraduates. I remember very vividly the first appearance of Dr. J. E. Goldthwait, then a house officer at the Boston City Hospital. He came, I think, to demonstrate to us some of the newer surgical appliances. He spoke in the same earnest and enthusiastic way that he does now, and his unusual ability and force impressed us even at that time.

"There was no rival medical club, and everyone considered it a great honor to belong to the Boylston. Everybody smoked during the meetings, as they do now, and the atmosphere which resulted in this small and very dirty room can easily be imagined. In essentials the scientific part of the meetings is the same to-day as it was fifteen years ago. In good fellowship the club is now infinitely superior."

For the last few years the Society has been accustomed to assemble in one of the rooms of the Boston Medical Library, first in the smoking-room on the third floor and later in the smaller of the two rooms on the top floor, the one used at the present time. It is an interesting fact that in this room is stored the library left by Nicholas Ward Boylston to Harvard University and entrusted to the care of the Medical Library. The organization has prospered in every way. The competition for the Boylston Prizes, which for many years excited little interest, has brought about the writing of a number of excellent papers, though there is still a chance for an increase in enthusiasm. Not only do the meetings afford to members an invaluable opportunity to acquire knowledge and to discuss subjects in which they are particularly interested, but they greatly advance the interests of friendship and sociability. Of this side of the life of the Society and of present conditions, Dr. John B. Hawes, 2nd, who was Secretary in 1902 and than whom no graduate of the last few years has done more to bring about the conditions he describes, writes as follows:

"In looking over the older records of the Boylston, one very rarely finds any mention of events of a social nature. Once I remember seeing on a yellow-stained page in a dusty volume the hurried scrawl, 'The beer did this'; this is all there is to lead me to believe that there was any beer. In talking with members of from ten to fifteen years back I was struck by the same thing,—the absence of anything other than a strictly scientific and literary medical atmosphere. That there is now something more than this, that the Society meetings are gatherings of genial souls where song and good cheer follow the evening's work, anyone who has recently attended will testify.

"This change was a gradual one, but took a definite form with the class of 1902. Dr. James G. Mumford was then President and Harry Bowditch a most excellent Secretary. Vincent, who is the owner of a moderately good voice and a large fund of humor, evidently thought that during the meeting he had no chance to shine and accordingly decided to do so afterwards. He was the first real Chorister. After the President had declared the meeting adjourned there was the usual rush for steins, and the cheese and crackers were spread open. Men stood around chatting, discussing the paper and the cases that had been presented till the psychic moment arrived when all were seized with a desire for song.

"The members took their places around the room in a half circle, basses on one side, tenors on the other, plain ordinary singers and non-singers wherever they could find seats, and then the Chorister opened up with 'Dolly Gray,' 'I am going far away,' or some other chorus. Homans would be called upon to recite his never-to-be-forgotten 'Captain Simmons,' Greenwood and Buffum sang 'Australia,' and Wilson rendered the now famous national hymn of the Boylston, 'Sweet Sixteen.' It became the custom this year to demand of new members on their first appearance some song or a speech; this, however, was not developed to the high pitch that it now is.

"The next class, 1903, added several new songs and customs to this after-meeting started in the preceding year. For the first time and quite by chance the offices of Secretary and of Chorister were filled by the same man. This has been taken as a precedent, however, and now the Secretary is chosen almost as much for his qualities for that part of the evening which follows the President's words, 'The meeting stands adjourned,' as for that which comes before. Whether or not this is wise time will tell; so far it seems to have worked very well. This year more was demanded of the new men. Previous to the meeting they were told that they would be expected to do something on their first appearance, and this they generally did. At the present time men are made to stand out in front of the gathering, answer what questions are asked, do just as they are told, stand considerable ragging, and then sing a song or tell a story,—something they must do. This is a good thing. The men get to know the faces and the names of the new members, and the club gets an idea of what their talents consist, if they have any, so that henceforth no new man, who can do a stunt of any kind, can hide his light under the guise of ignorance or modesty. In 1903 Burrage sang 'Australia'; Homans added new songs to his list,—'Anthony Comstock,' 'The Tombigbee River,' and others; and Phil Cook, splendidly out of tune, kept alive good old 'Sweet Sixteen.' The custom was introduced of having a 'Graduates Night' in the spring, when old members were invited to come around and join in the songs once more. A dinner was held this year, a very wet affair,—so wet that it has dampened the ardor of after-classes in that line.

"Each year has had its famous men and well-known choristers to lead them: Walter Phippen, Jerry Blake; Baldwin, who played, sang, danced, gave monologues, and was a host of good fellows in himself; Dexter, whose stories were always of the best; George Peter Howe, whose special duty it was to see that the beer did not freeze. One could keep on naming many men who have helped to make these social gatherings genial and pleasant.

"During this time the character of the club as one with a serious purpose, where during its formal session carefully prepared papers are read and cases discussed, has in no way changed except for the better. During the past year an attempt has been made to have the subjects of the papers follow certain lines and to have them read in a definite logical sequence; at almost every meeting there has been some one invited guest who possessed special knowledge regarding the subject for discussion and who could add much to its interest. This year all this has been under the guidance of Dr. Richard C. Cabot, the President now in office. He has given the Society a piano, and after adjournment joins in the singing and social programme which follows.

"The Boylston is now in flourishing shape; the men look forward to the meetings and the attendance is large. This strong, healthy condition is certainly in large part due not only to what of scientific interest is offered, but to the pleasant gatherings with songs and good cheer which every man who has attended any time during the past five years remembers with pleasure."

ACT OF INCORPORATION

AN ACT to Incorporate
The Boylston Medical Society of Harvard University

SECTION I.

BE it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, That ENOCH HALE, Jr., ZABDIEL BOYLSTON ADAMS, JOHN WARE, JOHN PHILLIPS SPOONER and DAVID W. GORHAM, together with such other persons as now are or may hereafter be associated with them, be, and they hereby are incorporated into a Society by the name of the BOYLSTON MEDICAL SOCIETY OF HARVARD UNIVERSITY; for the purpose of promoting emulation and inquiry among the students at the medical school connected with Harvard University, and others, and by that name shall be a corporation forever, with power to have a common seal, to sue and be sued, to establish laws, not repugnant to the constitution and laws of this commonwealth, to choose a president and such other officers as may be deemed expedient, and to take and hold any real and personal estate, by gift, grant, purchase or otherwise, and the same to alien or convey, provided the annual income thereof shall not exceed the sum of Five Hundred Dollars.

SECTION II.

And be it further enacted, That the members of said Society have power to elect annually seven Trustees, who shall be practising physicians in this commonwealth, and the Board of Trustees shall have the sole management and control of all the permanent funds of said Society, but the annual income thereof shall be disposed of in such manner as the Society shall direct.

SECTION III.

And be it further enacted, That the persons named in this Act, or any three of them, shall have power to call the first meeting of said Society at such time, and in such manner, as they may think proper.

June 13, 1823.

CONSTITUTION

ARTICLE I.

This Society shall be called the BOYLSTON MEDICAL SOCIETY OF HARVARD UNIVERSITY.

ARTICLE II.

The officers of this Society shall be a President, Vice-President, Secretary, who shall also act as Treasurer, and two Trustees.

ARTICLE III.

The President shall be a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, residing either in the city of Boston or within five miles of it. The Trustees shall be practising members of the Massachusetts Medical Society, residing within the commonwealth. The Vice-President and the Secretary shall be chosen from the immediate members, and shall have studied medicine for at least two years.

ARTICLE IV.

These officers shall be elected annually, at the last meeting in December, by written votes; a majority constituting a choice. The Trustees may be named on a single ticket, but the other officers shall be voted for separately.

ARTICLE V.

The immediate members of the Society shall be students in the Medical School of Harvard University, or persons connected with any of the Hospitals in Boston, or immediate vicinity, and shall have studied medicine for at least one year.

A committee on elections, to consist of at least five members, shall be chosen at the first fall meeting annually, who shall elect their own chairman and secretary, and may fill vacancies. Whenever any person shall be proposed for membership, application must be made by a member of the Society to this Committee, at least four days before any regular meeting. If a majority of the Committee shall deem him a suitable person for membership, they shall cause his name, with that of his proposer, to be laid before the Society, through its Secretary, at its next stated meeting. The names thus presented shall be voted upon by the Society at the next stated meeting following that at which they were presented. To elect shall require three-fourths of the ballots cast.

The persons thus elected shall become members after signing the Constitution, at one of the next two meetings following their election, and paying an entrance fee of five dollars.

ARTICLE VI.

The exercises of each stated meeting shall consist in the reading of an original paper on some medical subject, by some member of the Society; and in hearing reports of cases and other communications upon subjects connected with medical science. The essayist shall be appointed by the Secretary, if possible, from his own class, at least two weeks previous to the meeting at which the paper is to be read.

ARTICLE VII.

Any member neglecting to perform the duties assigned to him by the President or Secretary, shall cease to be a member of the Society, unless such member shall, at the next meeting, present a written excuse which shall be deemed satisfactory by two-thirds of the members present. If no such excuse shall be offered, or, being offered, shall not be accepted by the Society at its next regular meeting, the Secretary shall inform such member in writing that his connection with the Society is dissolved.

ARTICLE VIII.

No member of this Society may be expelled, except for ungentlemanly conduct, and by vote of four-fifths of the members present; nor then unless there have been furnished to such a member, two weeks previously, a written copy of the charges made against him, together with the name of his accuser; but nothing in this Article shall be so construed as to interfere with the provisions of Article VII.

ARTICLE IX.

A Certificate of Membership signed by the President and Secretary shall be awarded to every active member of the Society who has been present at three-fourths of the meetings held since his election. It may be awarded to a member who has not fulfilled this condition by vote of three-fourths of the members present. It shall be the duty of the Secretary to call the attention of newly elected members to this article of the Constitution.

ARTICLE X.

The President shall call and preside at all stated meetings of the Society.

ARTICLE XI.

The Board of Trustees shall have the sole management and control of all the permanent funds of the Society; but the annual income thereof shall be disposed of in such a manner as the Society shall direct.

ARTICLE XII.

The Vice-President shall perform the duties of the President in the absence of that officer.

ARTICLE XIII.

The Secretary shall keep a fair and correct journal of all proceedings of the Society; shall notify members-elect of the conditions of membership; shall issue notifications of all meetings; shall notify each member of any duties assigned to him; shall furnish to the chairman of each committee the vote by which such committee was appointed, together with a list of his associates. In his capacity of Treasurer, he shall have charge of all funds of the Society, not committed by the charter to the Board of Trustees; shall pay no money out of the treasury without the approval of the President; shall exhibit to the Society annually, at the close of his term of office, a statement of all his receipts and expenditures. To cover a deficit, he shall, before the close of his term of office, levy an assessment equally on all immediate members.

ARTICLE XIV.

After the incidental expenses of the Society shall have been defrayed, any funds which the treasury shall contain shall be disposed of in such manner as the Society shall direct.

ARTICLE XV.

In accordance with the provision of the late Ward Nicholas Boylston, Esq., the liberal founder of this Society, the sum of $25 annually shall be appropriated for prizes to be given to the author or authors of the most approved medical dissertations; and the residue of the income of the bequest shall be used as the Trustees may direct. The above appropriation shall be divided into a first prize of $15, and a second prize of $10. The amounts above mentioned may be given in money, books or instruments; but no person, not an active member of the Society, shall be permitted to receive any such prize.

ARTICLE XVI.

That the provisions of Article XV may be better carried into effect, at each annual election of officers the Society shall choose, from the members of the Massachusetts Medical Society residing in Boston, a committee of five to decide upon the merits of the dissertations presented for the aforesaid prizes. This Committee shall have the power to decline to make any award, should no dissertation be offered which in their opinion seems worthy of such distinction. Furthermore, should no dissertation be handed in worthy of a second prize, the whole available amount may be awarded as a first prize. If no first prize be awarded, only the above proportion of the available amount shall be awarded to the second prize or prizes, and no more than two prizes shall be awarded in any one year. In case no prize is awarded, the sum intended for such award shall be added to the sum to be appropriated for the following year.

ARTICLE XVII.

Dissertations for the Boylston Prizes must be placed in the hands of the President on or before the first day of March in each year, and on the next day they shall be delivered by him to the Chairman of the Prize Committee. Any dissertation handed to the President after the first day of March shall not be delivered to the Committee; but the accompanying letter shall be burned and the dissertation returned to the author as provided for in case of unsuccessful dissertations.

A fictitious signature must be affixed to each dissertation, and, accompanying each, shall be a sealed envelope, bearing the signature and enclosing the true name of the writer. No prize shall be awarded to any dissertation, the writer of which introduces anything indicative of its authorship.

The letters accompanying all unsuccessful dissertations shall be burned unopened, and the dissertations deposited with the President, to be by him returned to the authors, if called for within the three months succeeding the report of the Prize Committee.

ARTICLE XVIII.

The Committee on Dissertations should make known their decision to the President, on or before the first day of April. At the next regular meeting, the decision of the Committee shall be announced by the President.

ARTICLE XIX.

This Constitution shall not take effect unless it shall have been approved by three-fourths of the members present at the meeting at which it shall be acted upon, nor unless it shall have received the signatures of the President and Secretary.

ARTICLE XX.

The votes of three-fourths of the members present at any meeting shall be required to amend any part of this Constitution; notice having been given in writing, at least two weeks previously, that such amendment is proposed.

ARTICLE XXI.

All Constitutions and By-Laws for the government of this Society, passed prior to December, 1906, are hereby repealed.

RICHARD C. CABOT, President.
CHARLES O. DAY, JR., Secretary.

December 1, 1906.

BY-LAWS

§ I. The presence of eight members of this Society shall be necessary to constitute a quorum for business.

§ II. The President and the Secretary shall fix the date of the first fall meeting. The following stated meetings shall be held once every week until the Christmas recess of the Harvard Medical School, and during the remainder of the year at such periods as the Society shall from time to time determine.

§ III. Order of Business.

1. Secretary's Report.
2. Secretary's Communications.
3. Election of New Members.
4. Incidental Business.
5. Essay and Remarks.
6. Prepared Case and Remarks.
7. Reports of Cases, or other communications by members generally.
8. Appointment of Essayist and Reporter.
9. Adjournment.

§ IV. The essayist and case reader shall, at the meeting preceding that on which they are appointed to read, inform the Society, either verbally or by letter, of the subject of their respective communications.

§ V. Any member of this Society who is absent five consecutive meetings shall be accounted as having handed in his resignation, unless an excuse, satisfactory to two-thirds of those present, be given. Notice of absence will be sent by the Secretary on the third and fourth consecutive absence, and on the sixth meeting the resignation will take effect. Any member thus resigning may be reëlected by a three-fourths vote of those present.

All Hospital Internes and all those acting as such shall be excused from attendance at meetings except those at which they may be appointed to read an essay or a case.

§ VI. The Certificates of Membership shall be awarded by the Society to those members entitled to them upon the termination of their period of active membership.
